Looking after animals

A Rose

I help at an animal centre on Saturdays. I clean bowls and prepare food. I cannot take any animals home because our flat is small. The work can be tiring, but seeing a shy cat become friendly is the best part of my week.

B Sam

I look after my cousin's rabbit when she goes away. She writes instructions, and I follow them carefully. I send her a photo every day so she knows the rabbit is well. I would like a pet myself, but I am waiting until our family moves.

C Tara

Our family has a dog, and I walk him before school. My parents do the evening walk. A neighbour taught me simple training games. I used to think dogs only needed food and exercise, but now I know spending time together matters too.

8 Who is pleased when an animal becomes more confident? A / B / C

9 Who lacks enough space to take an animal home? A / B / C

Part 3 - Questions 14-18

Read the article, then answer the five questions on the next page.

A place on the school radio

Lily enjoyed listening to the school radio but thought she was too shy to speak on it. When the radio team needed someone to prepare short interviews, she volunteered to write questions. She was comfortable talking to one person, even if speaking to a large group frightened her.

Her first guest was a student who had won a drawing prize. Lily prepared ten questions, but the interview became more interesting when she listened to an unexpected answer. The guest mentioned learning from his grandmother. Lily asked about her instead of moving straight to the next question.

Later, the team asked Lily to record the introduction. She practised several times in an empty classroom. Hearing her own voice felt strange, but she realised that speaking clearly mattered more than sounding like a professional presenter.

The programme received friendly comments. Lily still felt nervous before recording, but she no longer saw that as a reason to stop. For the next interview, she prepared fewer questions and left more space to listen. She hoped other quiet students would try joining the team too.
